OBITUARY
James Park

The Bulletin's Stafford correspondent writes:

William Park was called to Gloucester last Wednesday by the sudden death of his brother, James Park. Mr. Park was here with his brother at the Riverside home, where he was born in Gloucester, Scotland, a number of years ago.

He came to Canada with his parents in 1841. He entered the woolen business in his youth and for several years was with the Niagara Falls Manufacturing Co. of East Lyme. Later he was with the Riverside Mills in Stafford. In 1866 he was one of the organizers of the Angus Park Manufacturing Co. of East Gloucester, and at the time of his death was president and superintendent.

He leaves his wife, Elizabeth Park, three daughters, Misses Lillian E. Eleanor I. and Olive C. Park, all at home; four brothers, Angus Park of Hartford, William Park of Stafford, George and Thomas Park of Dexter, Me., and a sister, Mrs. William Mountain of Amesbury, Mass. The funeral was held at his home at 2 o'clock Friday. Burial was in Gloucester.

Mrs. C. B. Hulbert.
Mrs. Mary Woodward Hulbert, 85, widow of Rev. C. B. Hulbert, died Monday morning at the home of her son, Rev. Henry Woodward Hulbert, pastor of the Groton Congregational church, on Monument street, Groton, after a long illness.

She was born in Ceylon, India, Sept. 21, 1835, daughter of Rev. Henry Woodward and Clara Eversen Woodward, American missionaries. When four years of age, and at the death of her parents, she came to the United States in America, located at Sandwich, N. H. She was educated at Thetford academy, Thetford, N. H., and married Rev. C. B. Hulbert, who later became principal of Middlebury college at Middlebury, Vt. Her husband died at the age of 90, four years ago. She was a descendant of Christopher Columbus, the first born in the Norwich settlement, and of E. A. Wheelock, founder of Dartmouth college.

She was the mother of six children, of whom are living, three: Rev. Henry Hulbert of Groton; Mr. George Hulbert of Port Clinton, Ohio; Prof. Homer B. Hulbert of Springfield, Mass.; and Prof. Archer Butler Hulbert of Colorado College, Colorado Springs, Colo. She has a number of grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Mrs. Alfred Moore of Hartford is the guest for a few days of Mrs. Allyn L. Brown.

Mrs. Ralph H. Melzer of Montville entertained at an informal tea Tuesday afternoon.

CASABIANCA
Casabianca the boy who stood on the burning deck whence all but him had fled was only ten years old at the time he met his death. His father was captain of the Orient, the flagship of Napoleon's fleet and during the battle of Abukir Bay in 1798 was compelled to assume command of the whole fleet because the admiral had been killed.

The death of the brave boy who remained steadfast until the vessel was destroyed by an explosion, rather than leave without the express command of his father, who lay too deeply wounded to hear his son's cry, aroused much sympathy and admiration. Mrs. Hemans expressed the general feeling in the closing words of her often parodied poem:

"But the noblest thing that perished there
Was that young, faithful heart."

Only one-third of the coast line of Cuba is accessible to vessels.

FINIAL OF R. V. JOHN H. BRODERICK AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH TUESDAY

With all the honors which a sorrowing and grateful people could pay a devoted and revered pastor, funeral services for Rev. John H. Broderick, since 1912 rector of St. Patrick's church, were held at the church Tuesday morning, beginning at 10 o'clock. Sanctuaries and pews were draped in mourning violet and at the gospel side of the main altar stood the white banner of the Holy Name society, draped in crepe. Tall palms were placed at the base of the sanctuary.

The church seats 1200, but many more than that number were present, although so perfect was the ushering plan that there was no confusion. The galleries were bench and a large block at the rear of the sanctuary were open to the general congregation. The first to enter and occupy the reserved seats at the front of the main aisle was a long line of Sisters of Mercy teachers in the parish school, with visiting nuns. Then as Organist Frank L. Barry played the Chopin Funeral March the choir entered from the side of the Holy Name society. James J. Flanagan, president, the members standing in open ranks while the ushers preceded the active bearers, members of the mourning family and other relatives, who were followed by the Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus in full regalia and bearing swords. In the hour of the funeral, members of this degree acted as a guard of honor for the body.

Meantime, about 150 priests from many dioceses of the state and from neighboring states, and a large number of visitors on either side of the high altar, forming an imposing procession, dividing and moving to news in the side aisles. The first of the priests, in the last, Rev. John J. Nihil, bishop of the diocese, in vestments of black and silver and wearing his mitre of white. The bishop, accompanied by a large number of priests, in full vestments, having as assistants the Vicar-General, Rev. Monsignor Thomas S. Duggan, the dean of the parish, Rev. Monsignor John J. Crowley, of New London, and the sub-deacon Rev. John F. Quinn, of Montville. The deacons of honor were Rev. T. W. O'Brien, of Hartford, and Rev. Dr. Michael J. Sullivan, of Hartford. Rev. Joseph E. McCarthy, of Montpelier, was center bearer and the acolytes were Rev. William P. Kennedy, of Bristol and Rev. Henry J. Coleman, of Southington. Rev. William H. Flynn of Hartford, diocesan chancellor, was master of ceremonies.

The body was the regular mass for the dead, during which the choir sang in Latin and choruses which brought out the full beauty of the meaning of the psalms, sequence and responses. The funeral mass was sung by Henry J. LaFontaine.

At the casket stood on the catafalque before the chancel, the Rev. Broderick, who was unable to move the pulpit to its regular place, consequently it was stationed near the entrance side of the altar. The body of the deceased, Rev. John H. Broderick, was placed in the casket by Rev. Broderick, who was assisted by Rev. John J. Nihil, bishop of the diocese, in vestments of black and silver and wearing his mitre of white. The bishop, accompanied by a large number of priests, in full vestments, having as assistants the Vicar-General, Rev. Monsignor Thomas S. Duggan, the dean of the parish, Rev. Monsignor John J. Crowley, of New London, and the sub-deacon Rev. John F. Quinn, of Montville. The deacons of honor were Rev. T. W. O'Brien, of Hartford, and Rev. Dr. Michael J. Sullivan, of Hartford. Rev. Joseph E. McCarthy, of Montpelier, was center bearer and the acolytes were Rev. William P. Kennedy, of Bristol and Rev. Henry J. Coleman, of Southington. Rev. William H.
